

MacARTHUR SAYS HIS FORCES ARE "RELATIVELY SECURE" AFTER BRILLIANT WITHDRAWALS THAT FOILED CHINESE PLAN TO DESTROY THEM WITH "ONE MASSIVE STRIKE"

Troops, Heavily Outnumbered, Came Through in Superior Manner

ENEMY'S PLAN FAILED

Losses Inflicted On The Enemy Said To Be Staggering

By Howard Handelman

(Far Eastern Director, I. N. S.)

TOKYO, Dec. 11.—(INS)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur visited Korea today and pronounced his forces "relatively secure" after brilliant withdrawals that foiled a Red Chinese plan to destroy them with "one massive strike."

The United Nations supreme commander flew to both the north-eastern and western Korean fronts where he conferred with his two top field leaders, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond and Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker.

He flew in his personal plane "Scamp," taking off from Tokyo's Haneda airport at 8:10 a. m. Monday (6:10 p. m. Sunday EST) and returning at 5:29 p. m. (3:29 a. m. EST).

In a dramatic statement which MacArthur wrote in his own hand during the return flight and which he read at dictation speed to newsmen at the airport, the supreme commander declared:

"The United Nations command, in spite of the recent heavy fighting, is in excellent shape with high morale and conspicuous self confidence.

"Although heavily outnumbered, it has come through in superior manner.

"The tactical withdrawals forced upon us by the overwhelming superiority of the enemy numbers have been conducted with skill by our field commanders and with a display of much gallantry by all the forces concerned.

"They have been made in good order and with unbroken cohesion among the various components.

"Every possible advantage has been taken of the fortunate premature disclosure of the surreptitious enemy buildup operations designed

MAILED-FIST DIPLOMACY

Bothered and bewildered because so many of our past foreign-policy experiments have backfired, the American people now are being tempted to turn to an entirely different philosophy in dealing with our international neighbors.

The new philosophy is that of the mailed fist. Discarded are such concepts as that of the familiar misquotation from Shakespeare—"Thrice armed is he whose cause is just." We would, instead, pin our faith on jungle law—on the materialistic, anti-Christian theory that "might makes right."

Not because she invented this concept, nor because it is more reprehensible for her to expound it than for any other to do so, but mainly because she expresses it so eloquently, let us quote from the distinguished New York Times columnist and expert on foreign affairs, Anne O'Hara McCormick:

"The disaster in Korea at least shows us where we stand. . . . The most cursory survey of the effects of the military retreat points up facts accepted in theory, publicly recognized in international conferences and communiques, but never until now either fully realized or effectively acted on.

"One is the unpalatable fact that while powerful aggressors threaten the world the only instrument of policy that counts is force in being. This is a hard saying for those of us who believe that war is the defeat of diplomacy, that armies are the last instead of the first way of settling disputes, and that, as Lester Pearson, Canadian Foreign Minister, said at Lake Success last night, 'we must guard freedom by wisdom as well as by arms.'"

Elsewhere in her column the writer speaks of England and France becoming "convinced of the paramount importance of military force."

Now, in replying to the quotation let us first of all be certain of precisely what it is which is said. The columnist is not making

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Photographing of two models both feminine, was the principal topic for discussion at the meeting of the Bucks County Photographic Society at the recreation center in New Hope. Practically every type of camera was in use by the members.

Although both models were feminine, each presented an entirely different photographic problem. One was an elderly person and the photographer's aim was to produce a picture which would show the strength of character and beauty of personality which is the result of meeting the problems of life for a great many years.

Leonard A. Hampton, Lahaska, was elected president of the Bucks County Postmasters' Association. He was named to succeed Joseph Zalot, Langhorne.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Sir Benegal N. Rau of India said that the Asian and Middle Eastern states would introduce a resolution in the United Nations General Assembly calling on Peiping to halt its troops at the Thirty-eighth Parallel and for a cease-fire in Korea. A "buffer zone" may also be demanded.

Members of the North Atlantic Military Committee, including Admiral Sherman, reached London to complete plans for integrated defense forces, including elements from West Germany. British and United States officials were reported ready to grant Bonn almost complete sovereignty in return for guarantees of Allied defense status and assurances that no trouble would be started on the Polish border or strategic goods shipped to Soviet-dominated areas. Generalissimo Franco, for the first time, publicly called on Britain to cede Gibraltar to Spain.

Congressional sentiment for quick application of mandatory price-wage controls grew following refusal of General Motors and Ford voluntarily to suspend price increases. Leon Keyserling forecast some such controls soon.

The Air Force plans to spend $6,000,000,000 for new planes to equip sixty-eight groups by June 26 and hopes to have an eighty-four-group force one year after that.

Some Farm Bureau leaders plan to urge drastic cuts in the Federal farm programs, including price supports, to help reduce non-defense spending. Industry will spend $4,800,000,000 on plant expansion during the first quarter of 1951 to meet defense needs, it was estimated in Washington.

Demands for skilled factory and farm workers to relieve anticipated labor shortages have flooded the Displaced Persons Commission.

WOMEN ASK FIREMEN TO FORM AUXILIARY

First Time In 57 Years For Such A Group To Be Formed At Doylestown

58 ARE READY TO JOIN

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 11.—For the first time in its 57-year-history Doylestown Fire Company has decided to accept the offer of a delegation of six women who are interested in organizing a Doylestown women's auxiliary. One active fireman made a plea for Doylestown to take a part in county-wide firemen's activities.

Mrs. William Notarianni, who read the names of 58 women interested in joining the auxiliary, was accompanied by a delegation of Mrs. Clarence Irwin, Mrs. Anna Kelly, Mrs. C. Clifford Beck, Mrs. Ethel Miller and Mrs. Margaret Evans.

Mrs. Notarianni, who said the organization meeting will be held some time this month, emphasized the role the women's auxiliary can play in entertaining the firemen and auxiliary women of Bucks county at the annual parade here in June.

"We realize we are asking for a lot of hard work, but we feel that we can help the firemen along," said Mrs. Notarianni.

In an effort to arouse the Doylestown firemen from their lethargy and to spur them on to take an interest and part in the county firemen's association and activities, particularly since they will be host to the county parade in June, Nick Petrillo said: "Doylestown Fire Company is the black sheep in the Bucks County Firemen's Association. We are like an 'active member' who never shows up or takes any part in anything and we know what we think of a fireman like that."

Two men were killed in an airplane crash; one man was fatally hurt in an automobile accident, and two men were injured in collisions of motor vehicles in Bucks County during the week-end.

Frank Blankowolovich, 51, of Allentown, was killed when his automobile struck a parked car near Quakertown.

With its compass out of order and buffeted by a snowstorm, a small private airplane crashed yesterday near a country schoolhouse at Shelly, Bucks county, carrying its two occupants to their deaths.

The victims were identified as John Karpowicz, 40, of Bethlehem, R. D. 3, and his brother-in-law, Emory Bainba, 39, of 346 Liberty street, Bethlehem.

State police said the men had flown to Philadelphia yesterday to attend the football game between the Philadelphia Eagles and the

New York Giants. They crashed within 10 miles of their home destination, the Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport at Catasauqua.

A resident of Shelly, a small village between Quakertown and Coopersburg, telephoned to the State police sub-station at Quakertown that the plane had crashed at 6:05 p. m.

Just 24 minutes earlier, Karpowicz, the pilot, had radioed to the Civil Aeronautics Administration range station at the Catasauqua airport that he was having difficulty in the snowstorm. He was given advice on how to reach his landing field, but four minutes later, at 5:45 p. m., radioed that his compass had "lost stability."

That was the last word heard from the plane until State police were notified that it had plowed into a field near the one-room Sal-

MAN'S BODY IS FOUND IN RIVER NEAR YACHT CLUB

Body Identified as That of Charles F. Liebrandt, 62, of Landreth Manor

MISSING SINCE SAT. PM

Overcoat and Scarf Found On Dock of Bristol Yacht Club

Charles F. Liebrandt, 62, formerly of Philadelphia, but who has been living at 60 Manor Circle, Landreth Manor, with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kenyon, was found drowned yesterday afternoon in the Delaware river. The body was seen by members of the Bristol Yacht Club, in Edgely.

Bristol police were called, and Fire Chief Clifford Hagerman went to the scene and summoned Edgely firemen, who recovered the body. Chief Hagerman saw the body in the river about 30 feet from shore. Liebrandt's overcoat and scarf were found on the Bristol Yacht Club dock. The state police were called and the body was removed to the John C. Black funeral home.

Fred Kenyon identified the body as that of his brother-in-law, Charles F. Liebrandt.

Liebrandt had been living with the Kenyons for the past six or seven weeks. The Kenyons went out Saturday evening and when they left Liebrandt was at home, but when they returned he was gone and they found a note from him, so they notified the Bristol police, who sent out a police message reporting the man as missing.

ONE OF 3 FUGITIVES IS HELD FOR COURT

Willie Hill, Trenton, Placed Under $1,000 Bail For Court Trial

OTHER TWO ARE FINED

The three Trenton men taken into custody early Saturday morning by police were given hearings. Two of the three were fined and the third held for court on two charges.

The men: Herbert Hill, 19, Union street; Frank Lee Wilson, 21, Berg street; and Willie L. Hill, 27, Union street, were given hearings before Justice of Peace Anthony Niccol. Willie Hill was charged with being in unlawful possession of a firearm and of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The bail was set at $500 on each of the charges. The other two men were charged with disorderly conduct and each was fined $10 and costs.

The three men were acting suspiciously in a car in the vicinity of the Weed Garage at about two o'clock Saturday morning. When Officers Chicheletti and Morris approached in the police patrol car, the three took off and tried to make a get-away east on Radcliffe street toward Edgely.

The police caught up with the fugitives at Edgely and placed them under arrest at the point of police pistols. Willie Hill, as police attempted to arrest him, attempted to stick his hand in his pocket. It was then that Officer Morris shoved the police gun in Hill's ribs. Hill later was found to have been armed with a .32 caliber gun.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan (Distributed by International News Service)

The proposition to fly the UN flag over public buildings should be held up until the UN comes out from under the table.

The only way you could fly it now would be upside down. That's for distress and the UN sure is distressing.

And has caused the distress of most people who looked to it for guidance and got grieved.

And as the flag pictures the world globe, the appropriate position is upside down until further notice. . . . That's how the world looks.

Even the old League of Nations held the line longer than this super-duper debating society which has managed to put a hammer-lock on itself even before it got a permanent building.

Not that we're entirely guiltless. . . . Not all the angry voices around the council table have had to be translated into English.

Nor did the UN send us out chasing the golden fleece which turned out to be mink-dyed rabbit.

RELATIVELY HONEST

There are people who insist that there is no such thing as relative honesty—that people either are honest or they aren't. The same people are usually purists who deplore as solstitial the preamble of the United States Constitution, where it says "... in order to form a more perfect union ..." More perfect, indeed, they say. How can you improve on perfection?

They are wrong, of course. While they are right in believing that there is logic in language, they overlook the role (and the correctness) of idiom and metaphor.

Such people—and they are legion—would never share the feeling that Dan Rees, recently elected county commissioner in Cheyenne, Wyo., may qualify as a relatively honest politician. Rees promised many things in his campaign. One of his promises was to be "reasonably honest." That in itself was refreshing.

After he was elected, he ran a newspaper ad in which he said: "All promises made in the heat of the campaign are hereby retracted; they are null and void and of no further value."

There have been plenty of politicians who could have said the same—and didn't. When they are compared with Rees, the verdict on him has to be: "Relatively honest."

OUTTAXING ENGLAND

Taxes imposed on corporation profits in Great Britain—the socialist paradise—are lower than in the United States.

Under the British program there is no excess profits tax and none is contemplated. Nor is mere bigness subject to special financial penalty. The rates remain the same, regardless of the size of the corporation. In this country, on the contrary, the rate rises from 35 per cent for the small company up to 44.5 per cent for the large one.

Specifically, this is what happens to the profits of corporations in Great Britain and the United States: Over here a company earning $100,000 a year pays a federal tax of $40,000. Over there it pays $36,900. In the United States a corporation with a profit of $1,000,000 is taxed $445,000. The tax on a similar profit in Great Britain is $369,000.

The British idea, which the socialists have been unable to eradicate thus far—and which naturally is not accepted by the busy little planners in Washington—is to leave corporations with funds to plow back into the business.

General Eisenhower says Americans must keep their chins up. The same goes for their bombers.

There is no perpetual motion, but Moscow's eternal trouble making is a reasonable facsimile thereof.

Germany, Italy and Japan posed as have-not countries when they started their wars. But Russia hasn't even that excuse.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1950
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11—Robert J. Silberman is executive secretary of the National Lawyers Guild. He directed the fight, and the Guild furnished the funds, in the attempt to defeat the McCarran Communist Control Bill, which Congress approved over a Presidential veto.

The Guild has been labeled the "foremost legal bulwark of the Communist party, its front organizations and controlled unions" in a report issued by the House Committee on Un-American Activities after a lengthy investigation.

At Silberman's instigation, the Guild went to the defense of Gerhart Eisler, international Kremlin spy now working the Soviet side of the street in Berlin; it has attempted to keep Leon Josephson out of jail, and it has taken legal action on behalf of Carl Marzani. It was Josephson who provided false passports for the illegal entry into the U. S. of such characters as Eisler, Marzani lied to the Government regarding his membership in the Communist party, and went to jail for his pains.

The latest effort of the Guild on behalf of Communists was in support of the 11 Communist party officials who were convicted of conspiracy to advocate the overthrow of the U. S. Government by force and violence.

Silberman recently held a press conference along with Thomas I. Emerson, president of the Guild, and both denied they had anything to do with Communists. Emerson is a Yale University professor.

President Truman apparently has accepted Silberman's and Emerson's word. He invited the National Lawyers Guild to participate in the mid-century White House conference on children and youth, now under way in Washington. Silberman was the Guild representative at the White House conference. He is attending the sessions and voicing his opinions regarding American youth.

Congressman Harold Velde (R., Ill.) latched on to an interesting document on the same date Silberman was invited to attend the conference. An ex-G Man, Velde will only say that the cablegram was intercepted by a security agency. It reads as follows:

"J. Nordman, 19 Quai Bourbon, Paris, France:

"Section position still undetermined. Believe modified motif unacceptable."

COMMUNICATION

Phila., Pa., Dec. 5, 1950.
Editor, The Courier:

Dear Sir:
Your article of November 30, 1950, is being read with reference to a new accredited hospital for Bristol, Pa. Not only are Bristolians interested in the project, but people in many distant communities as well.

Many of your projects in the past have received support by outsiders who know your business people well. They ought to receive credit as well. A medical school and a hospital adjoining was almost started three years ago. But the idea has been postponed for fear of resentment locally, by factions.

A big hospital is possible in Bristol. If the men in your town and the ladies as well, who have been in on the ground floor when such ideas were a gleam in somebody's eyes, would feel free to give suggestions, then it becomes easier. I have seen two very big hospitals and a church started on a proverbial shoestring because everybody benefits because everybody is interested.

For your information, allow me to say a lot of money earned in Bristol, Pa., is spent in the big cities, not that Bristol does not have what it takes but because the big towns have more variety of the same item. This statement is true of many towns throughout the world.

To get a big hospital for Bristol is the same as any man starting a business today anywhere. He must be acquainted with the fundamentals. Eleven million dollars is available to a new medical center to be started soon in Philadelphia.

Cater to your local business people, your local doctors, dentists, physiotherapists and drug stores and you will have sound advice on a new hospital. They might sound like screwballs but they get the results. Don't high hat them and pass them by but listen. Forget Bristol is small. It won't always stay small. Some day Bristol, Pa., will be like Bristol, England, with one-half million population.

Lots of luck to you in your aim to get a hospital of 300 beds or more. We outsiders have helped in the past and will do so in the future.

Sincerely,
DR. JOSEPH L. CAMPUS,
Philadelphia.

Calling North Pole

By RAY A. LA JOIE

JINGLE BELL FOUR

WITH a smile Mrs. Santa Claus turned to the little helper and said:

"Dando, bring the sleigh around to the door in less than 10 minutes. I am going to run the Christmas business this year. Do you know the children that live in the poor section of the town?"

"Yes, ma'am," he replied in a loud voice.

"And the children in the orphanage?"

"Certainly, ma'am. Every one of them." He put his hand on his heart and bowed lowly.

"And Dando, if you know of any crippled or blind, or sick children in your neighborhood"—Dando lived in the Working Men's Lane—"we'll drop big bundles of nice things there."

At this announcement Dando stood on one leg, then on the other, and finally being unable to hold back his delight any longer, he opened the door and turned a double somersault in the hall.

For didn't Dando have a little daughter, who was so anxious for a music box? And didn't he know of a beautiful one that played five lovely tunes, packed in Santa's sleigh? He was sure the grand old lady would give it to her.

As this was a new business for Mrs. Santa Claus, of course she didn't have anything suitable to wear.

"I'll dress up in Santa Claus' clothes," she said to herself. So she put on his red and white coat and his big red cap trimmed in soft white fur.

The coat was so large it wrapped twice around her, and the fur cap kept slipping down over her nose, but she tied it on as well as she could with a bright red scarf.

Then she jumped into the sleigh with the bells jingling, the dog barking, the cat meowing and Yak-Yak the parrot screaming at the top of his crackling voice: "Clackit! Clackit! What a racket!"

"What do you suppose Santa Claus will say tomorrow when he wakes up?" said Dando, as he tucked the warm green robes around Mrs. Claus and gathered up the reins.

"Dando," she whispered confidentially, "I believe he will really be glad about it. He has been terribly worried lately because it has seemed to him that Christmas wasn't exactly what it ought to be."

"The rich children have all the good things and the nicest of presents, and so many poor children never have anything at all. "Santa Claus can't help that. You know he has nothing of his own to give. Other people provide the things, and all he has to do is to obey orders and go where he is sent."

"I am so glad that I don't know where one of those gifts belong, but they certainly won't be thrown away. Oh Dando! The poor children shall have a beautiful Christmas this year!"

Then over the hills and through the valleys and into the cities and towns and villages, dashed the sleigh with its load of glittering treasures, and dear Lady Santa Claus was as happy as a child.

And Prancer and Dancer, and Dunder and Blitzen, and Marly and Persa and Yak-Yak and Dando were excited with joy, but Santa lay in his night cap and dressing gown, fast asleep.

RITA'S RETURN

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — The stage is being set at Columbia studios for Rita Hayworth's return to pictures. Headman Harry Cohn is sending a director to Europe with a batch of scripts for Aly Khan's princess to consider. One of them, and apparently the one Cohn prefers, is a story in which Rita would play the part of a ballet dancer.

pner, 27, 5194 Jefferson st., Philadelphia, a Purple Heart World War I Infantryman.

Calling the proprietor of the bar, mes C. Flood, before him, Judge Miller said: "It is your duty or your bartender's duty to know what is on in your place. You are argued with knowing what your customers do, and how they act or have, and you had no right to keep on selling them drinks when they were obviously intoxicated." To the three defendants, who are skemen on freight trains, the court said: "I think you are not at all what we commonly call burglars. Don't excuse the landlord in this case. You were drinking after hours and he must have known that was going on."

Joseph L. O'Connor, 2921 Sunrise e., Phila., testified he came "in a little money," and asked the o to help him celebrate.

Trooper Andrew J. Kutney, nghorne sub-station Pennsylvania State Policeman, said two the defendants forced a back or open and that Broderick was rrying a case of beer under his m when caught.

The defendant testified they reflected trying a rear door, but re hazy as to details because y had been drinking too much. They testified they wanted to re-y Flood for damages done to his ice and he said, "That's all right." Howard Bagosy, 28, 161 Diamond e., Sellersville, U. S. "Fortunately, we don't have much this sort of thing in Bucks coun-," said President Judge Keller. "I have never had a case in ich so many filthy, obscene and rible pictures were involved. "I never had a good body of my n and have always envied some- e who had a nice body," said the endant, who admitted taking tures of men, women and mem- rs of his family, including a other and sister-in-law, in their nsdale home.

Bucks County Firemen Hear of Necessity For Radio Equipment

porting on the conditions of the canal stated that steel has been the hold-up on the project and that it has been delivered now, so the viaduct will soon be finished and water will be running in the canal before long.

Robert said: "Under the workmen's compensation firemen are only protected when going to, returning and while attending a fire at the present time, unless township officials or borough councils order the firemen to do other work or pass a resolution to cover the other duties they have. It is the firemen's duty to see that such resolutions are passed by their borough councils or township superiors," he cautioned.

William L. Stackhouse, told the members that a book is being made up for civilian defense, listing all the fire companies in the county and the equipment they have. The county is paying for the printing of the books. Forms have been sent out to all companies to fill out for the book and they are to be in as soon as possible. "The book will be between 50 and 60 pages and will have information about the county, as well as the fire companies," Stackhouse stated. "The book is not to be a souvenir edition but a book of information."

President Wassner appointed William L. Stackhouse, chairman of a committee to meet with Mrs. Thomas B. Stockham to discuss a memorial to the late Thomas B. Stockham.

L. L. Ellis, district manager of General Electric mobiletelephone, was introduced. He told of the history of the county in being unprepared for war. He stated that at present the county is more alert to what can happen and that is why civilian defense is being set-up and the fire companies will play a big part in it. "That is why radio equipment should be set up for all police and fire companies in the county."

He introduced Charles Chaney, district representative of General Electric narrow band FM equipment. Mr. Chaney said: "A 250-watt radio station is needed in Doylestown to take care of the county fire and police work." He told those present of the advantages of having this kind of equipment. "It would do away with a lot of telephoning that the firemen do in time of fire," Chaney stated. "Most counties now have this kind of equipment and Bucks needs it very badly as this county is no longer a farming county, but will be highly industrial in the very near future," he said.

Questions were asked about the costs and kinds of equipment that might be needed. Both Mr. Ellis and Chaney answered questions.

Refreshments were served. It was announced that the next meeting will be in March of 1951, in Quakertown at the home of Quakertown Fire Co. No. 2.

MacArthur Says His Forces Are "Relatively Secure" to encompass our destruction by one massive strike.

"This enemy plan has failed. "All of our units are intact and the losses inflicted on the enemy have been staggering—estimated by local commanders in the field as high as ten to one, compared to our own.

"The enemy claims of United Nations losses in men and material are fantastically exaggerated.

"We are being forced to give ground but our fighting capacity has suffered little general impairment.

"Notwithstanding the enormous danger inherent in the drastic change in the nature and capability of the enemy force, I consider that the command for the time being is relatively secure.

"Our forces were unable to complete their prescribed mission due to intervening circumstances beyond their power to control, but they are still an undefeated command of high morale and marked battle efficiency."

Gen. MacArthur flew first to the northeast Korean port of Hungnam where U. S. First Marine and Army Seventh Division troops were completing an heroic escape from Chinese entrapment to a narrow beachhead.

At an airfield outside Hungnam, the UN military chief conferred for two hours with the commander of his Tenth Corps, Maj. Gen. Almond.

Then MacArthur flew southwest across the Korean peninsula to Seoul's Kimpo airfield where he held a two-hour council of war with Lt. Gen. Walker, commander of the U. S. Eighth Army which has just finished a long withdrawal down the western seaboard.

MacArthur was accompanied by several of his aides—including Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commander of the U. S. Far East Air Forces—on the one-day flying trip to and from the Korean fronts.

It was MacArthur's fifth visit to the Korean war theater. His first trip was made a few days after the outbreak of the conflict last summer when he inspected the front below Red-captured Seoul.

His second was made with the naval armada that carried out the September 15th Inchon amphibious landings that resulted in Seoul's liberation.

The third was a flight in October in which MacArthur personally supervised from his plane the American airborne landings north of Pyongyang designed to cut off Red troops retreating from the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

The five-star general's fourth trip to Korea took him to the northwest front above Pyongyang where on November 24th he launched the all-out offensive that forced the Chinese Reds to throw their main invasion units prematurely into the current counter-drive.

The main discussions centered around the proper methods of handling the large volume of Christmas mail. Assistant Postmaster Edward M. Tranch, of Lahaska, and Raymond G. Mathews, superintendent of mails, Lahaska, discussed the proper methods of sorting mail.

The next meeting will be held at Buckingham on January 10.

Appointment of a new chief and two assistant chiefs of the Quakertown Fire Department took place at the meeting of Borough Council. Russell Shelly was named to succeed Granville Cressman as chief, and his assistants will be James Wark and Edwin Swartz.

merely a general plea for preparedness akin to Teddy Roosevelt's "walk softly—and carry a big stick." Armed strength, to her mind, is not just one among many elements—it is (note her words) "paramount," "the only instrument of policy that counts." She is far too able a writer not to find the words she needs to express herself, and not to know what they mean when she uses them. And just to prove that this is what she really means, not something else, note also that she is setting out deliberately to refute the Canadian Foreign Minister who said that "we must guard freedom by wisdom as well as by arms."

It is a very simple matter to disprove that strength of arms is "paramount" in international negotiations—that it is "the only instrument of policy that counts."

Let us go back to the year 1945. That is the year in which the seeds were sown that are now coming to harvest. In three great world-power conferences that year, our two New Deal Presidents were out-traded one after the other. That is the year we won the war and lost the peace.

The three meetings at which the present unholy mess was brewed were:

1. Crimean conference, which arrogated the Atlantic Charter and handed over to Russia's tender mercies all the small East-European nations to which we had been promising the four freedoms—Poland, Finland, what was left of the Baltic states, and the Balkans, along with Manchuria, the Kuriles, and Korea down to the 38th parallel.

2. San Francisco conference, where the half-baked United Nations charter, with its pious frauds, its politics-niddled complexities of make-up, and its fatal defect of the veto clause, was jammed through unexamined and unconsidered by the successors of the Roosevelt regime—most of whom knew next to nothing about what had preceded that meeting.

3. Potsdam conference, where Truman, complete tyro in diplomacy, attempted to outbargain Stalin, and lost virtually every chance for a durable peace. He agreed to a patched-together policy for occupied Germany, with Russia given looter's privileges over the whole (in the name of reparations); agreed to indefinite delay for a centralized government over occupied Germany; agreed to allow each of the allies to be substantially supreme in its own zone of occupation; agreed to make Berlin the seat of the joint allied government—without making any provision for right of American entry to Berlin!

Those were the three meetings at which our rulers and diplomats made the concessions which have now brought us to the verge of World War III—and have even raised considerable question of our power to survive such a war.

What was our military status at that period?

There is the key question. The casual reader who has noted the urgency with which writers such as the Times expert call for military strength as "paramount" and as "the only instrument of policy that counts," would be apt to make a hasty and quite erroneous conclusion as to our military prowess at that time. He might think we were weak.

On the contrary we were strong—we were at the peak and pinnacle of armed might, not merely the strongest we ourselves have ever been, but the strongest any nation in history has ever reached; an army and navy and airforce that embraced the earth, rooted in a flourishing industrial economy on our home-front.

If military strength were truly "paramount," we couldn't have lost, back in 1945. Or put it this way—the other nations which outtraded us in the three 1945 bargain-counter sessions were all greatly inferior to us in military prowess. They swindled us blind—with only a fraction of our armed strength.

The clamor for super-arms, on the theory that this will automatically reestablish our dwindling leadership in the world, and that it will, if not guarantee justice in all our foreign relations, at least silence protests about the injustices—all this is a very dangerous, shortsighted and uninspiring approach to world problems.

Its danger lies in its self-deception, and in the fact that it is a sort of special pleading which conceals the very real and grave blunders which have been made in the past and would be fatal to repeat in the future.

Our foreign affairs have been, for nearly twenty years, in the hands of inept and incompetent theorists, who have applied to the problems every conceivable yardstick except that of right and wrong.

Take the United Nations program as an example—there is an outrageous injustice in its basic concepts, which is that the nations which are strong are to have more rights than those which are weak. Equally outrageous to any sense of decency and propriety is the fundamental voting arrangement, which is the flaw that has wrecked all immediate chances of peace through United Nations endeavors—the plan that any large nation shall have the power of vetoing all efforts to compel it to be just in its dealings.

But the wrong-doing which is at the heart of America's deepening dilemma in world affairs touches on another field. That is in the matter of unkept promises.

Our difficulty, in facing the rise of Russian communism, lies in the fact that nowhere on earth does any substantial group of nations wish to follow our leadership. We are holding only a handful together, and those by coercion on the one hand, bribery on the other.

Why this great and painful reluctance to accept the leadership of this nation, once the inspiration of all races?

Call the roll—how many have we betrayed? Poland has been mentioned. And Finland. How about Estonia and Latvia and Lithuania? How about Bulgaria and Romania and Hungary and Czechoslovakia and Austria? How about the German people themselves? How about the Chinese?

It makes little difference whether you attempt to justify our non-adherence to our promises to all these peoples, or attempt to argue that it was simply unfortunate that we promised more than we could fulfill. The point is that no one yet, neither individual nor nation, ever won friends and adherents by running on promises.

This is a hard and bitter doctrine. It is quite possible that it is asking more than is humanly possible to call upon the American people to admit that so much of our foreign policy has been outrageous betrayal of sacred promises, and that therein lies the great weakness of our present position.

Look at it from the point of view of the little guy in the middle—Mihailovic trusted us; look what happened to him! The Polish patriots in Warsaw trusted us and got liquidated for their pains!

But popularity of a fact has nothing to do with its validity. Anyone who wishes to talk accurately and constructively about contemporary world problems ought to face the truth, not hide behind evasions and inventions.

And the fundamental fact about the responsibility for our present difficulties is the paucity, not of military strength, but of wisdom, on the part of those who have been in charge of our national government for the past several years.

Too Many Outside Activities

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

MANY talented youths and parents get into so many out-of-school or out-of-home activities that, before they know it, they are wearing themselves out and growing jittery. It's very easy to get into such a dither. Indeed, it's sometimes hard not to do so.

Such activities afford creative outlets and win social approvals and personal satisfactions. And those who do things well are naturally urged to do more. The youth with talent and a deep sense of responsibility, having done so well in one or more activities, is urged to enter more activities. So also the mother, who in her club, P.T.A. or church has carried through very successfully one enterprise, is urged to take on new ones. "To him that hath, it shall be given."

Good Values

Now there usually are good values to be gained by the youth or parent from such activities, but too much is too much. The pity of it is that so many youths in school and so many parents do not participate at all in such activities. One of the biggest problems in any school, club, P.T.A., church or similar group is to induce more persons to participate and thus bring out hidden talents and develop leadership.

Yet in practically every junior and senior high school and college there's a relatively small group of youths engaged in far too many extra-curricular activities. Some of these talented, willing youths are in so many things that they just don't have time to loiter and relax. They are all keyed up most of the time, running in high gear; often very tired. Some of them usually have a strained demeanor and may often look like adults. Unless they lessen their load, they are facing emotional catastrophe. All too many of these choicest youths are breaking.

Few Teachers

Yet few teachers and parents do anything about it. Teachers who head certain clubs or other activities, thinking of their own reputations, incline to egg on these youths. Also leaders of activities in the community are always seeking out these youths. Parents applaud them to greater effort. Though these parents sometimes express wonder at how their sons and daughters can do so much, they enjoy the reflecting or reflected glory. "Just like me," some father or mother may say. Parents should persuade, even sometimes require, the adolescent to reduce the number of his activities. Certainly the school should do so, as it usually has more perspective and can judge objectively. The school psychologist or psychiatrist should take the initiative.

Some teachers are also doing far too much "good" outside their classrooms. Right now some of them are engaged in coaching programs for their P.T.A. or church and will be worn to frazzles by Christmas time. School administrators should protect these teachers instead of exploiting them so often.

As for parents, who will protect them? Let me entreat parents who are engaged in many useful activities, to take stock and ask themselves if they are able to loiter and laugh with the family at the dinner table or around the fire-side? Also let me warn those mothers who undertake the making of more Christmas presents than their own physical and mental health and happiness can afford.

1500 Children Shout With Glee When Santa Arrives

Fifteen hundred children yelled with joy when Santa Claus raced across the Bristol High School yard with a team of horses to greet the boys and girls at the second annual Christmas party given by the U. A. W. C. I. O. Local 130, Kaiser Metal Products, Inc., yesterday afternoon.

Edward Feehan, chairman of the Christmas party committee, introduced John Dougherty, president of the local, as master of ceremonies for the party to parents and children gathered in the high school auditorium.

Dougherty said, "It is a great pleasure to see so many here today and on behalf of the officials of the union and the committee, a hearty welcome is extended to all. This is the second children's Christmas party the union has held and it is hoped that it will be an annual affair. The past 12 months have been more prosperous for union members than any in the past four years and thus this is a joyous occasion."

A cartoon was shown for the kids after which Mrs. Alice Swank was introduced to conduct the entertainment and lead the group singing.

Gerald McDavitt, age 14, played a trumpet solo after which Judy Volpe, age 9, sang a number of Christmas songs. Nancy Coulter did an acrobatic dance, and her sister, Rose, played the accordion solo.

Mrs. Swank led the group in singing while waiting for Santa Claus to arrive.

John Dougherty reported that Santa was on his way. He was then seen by the children racing across the school yard in a wagon drawn by two horses. A shout of glee arose from the children as Santa came in the door.

Santa Claus greeted all the children and told them that they should all be good boys and girls and he would be sure and see them on Christmas and that his helpers had a gift for them now.

Gifts of dolls, footballs, cleaning sets, games, gun and holster sets, dishes, cash registers, charm bracelets and a box of candy was given to each child as they left for home. The role of Santa was portrayed by Anthony Niccol.

Santa is Scouting Around

Oh, Santa is in town I just saw him fly by The window upside down A twinkle in his eye. His coat was flaming red His whiskers snowy white A stocking capped his head His boots were black as night His face a crimson smile His belly shook with glee He paused a little while To see what he could see. He saw you crying hard And sister being bad He flew right out the yard A-scribbling on his pad Oh, what a terrible shame With one shake of his wrist He probably crossed your name Right off his Christmas list. You might try being good And see if he'll come back On Christmas Eve he could Have something in his pack. To fill your stocking high And trim the tree with joy Before his reindeer fly Him to another boy. You'd better start right now To curb each naughty whim And Santa may allow You're good enough for him. —ANNE WILSON

SHORT HAIR

NEW YORK — (INS) — If you want to be in style this season, you'll wear your hair short. That, at least, is the latest word from the country's leading coiffure designers. The well-dressed woman of today, they say, will wear her hair about two to four inches from the nape, depending, of course, on her height and the length and shape of her neck.

ROAD COSTS

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (INS) — For every dollar being spent on highway construction in the United States this year, 70 cents will be spent on maintenance. This is twice the prewar rate for highway maintenance and is due largely, according to Thomas H. MacDonald, U. S. Commissioner of Public Roads, "to the destructive effects of heavy truck traffic, whose misuse and abuse will postpone the day of reasonable maintenance costs indefinitely."
